

MOM

--It seems that Mrs. Engelhart wasn't the only one complaining. There were many things not quite right with that store. People wrote letters to the main office of Waldbaums. It turns out that it's not really a Waldbaums. This manager, whoever he was, opened the store and hung out a sign that said Waldbaums. Naturally your father was upset. He didn't like his tax dollars going to the wrong place.

Ricky is still tugging at the package of razor blades, with no success.

RICKY

What do his tax dollars have to do with a phony Waldbaums?

MOM

The man who opened the store was an ex-convict. Allegedly rehabilitated. Your father wrote a letter to Congressman Denunzio about it.

RICKY

So?

MOM

So... What?

RICKY

So... Who was at the Super Stop and Shop at six o'clock this morning?

MOM

I was.

RICKY

I know that... I know that! But who else?!

MOM

What time do you have? I think my watch stopped.

RICKY

It's a little after seven. Mom... there's something--

MOM

--I have to remember to call your father to see how his flight went. He drove poor Bobby Bonnici crazy.

RICKY

Mom... I--

MOM

--You remember Bobby, don't you?

RICKY

Who?
